Straight & Small Batch Bourbon

Straight whiskey is made from at least 51% of any grain, distilled to a maximum of 160 proof and aged at no more than 125 proof, for over 2 years in new charred oak barrels. No coloring or flavoring may be added. If the whiskey is aged for less than 4 years, its age must be stated on the bottle. Small Batch Bourbon is a mingling of select barrels of whiskey that have matured into a specific style.

Maker's Mark

Tennessee Whiskey

This type of whiskey is made from at least 51% corn, distilled to a maximum of 160 proof and filtered through a minimum of 10 feet of sugar-maple charcoal.

Gentleman Jack

Blended Scotch Whisky

There can be many (up to 50) different types of malt whiskies blended with grain whisky (from cereals) to make a blended whisky. Most Scotch whiskies usually age from five to ten years, sometimes much longer.

Johnnie Walker Black Label Chivas Regal

Vodka

Vodka, a clear, almost flavorless spirit, is usually thought of as the national spirit of Russia and other Slavic countries, which have produced vodka for 600 years. Vodka was originally distilled only from potatoes, but today, it is also made from grain (mostly wheat), rye, and corn in most countries in the world. Ask about our flavored vodkas!

Single Malt Scotch Whisky

Single Malt Whisky is the product of a single distillery, as opposed to a blended whisky which is a mixture of many malt and grain whiskies. Until the mid 1800s, nearly all scotches were single malt.

the Glenlivet

Canadian Whisky

Canadian whisky is blended from cereal grains and aged in white oak barrels for a minimum of three years. Canadian whiskies sold to the U.S. are blends bottled at a minimum of 80 proof and are generally four years old or older.

Crown Royal Special Reserve

Cognac

Cognac can only be produced in the legally-defined region of Cognac, France. The cognac you drink today was produced using methods dating back to the seventeenth century. All cognac is aged a minimum of 30 months; maturing slowly over long years in cellars, the cognac acquires a smoothness and flavor beyond compare.

Courvoisier V.S. Hennessy V.S.

Gin

Gin is basically a distilled grain spirit flavored with extracts from different plants, mainly the juniper berry. Though gin has been produced and consumed for centuries, the methods for making the quality gin that we drink today have only been around since the turn of the century.
